PERSONAL PHILOSOPHY

For me, three things matter in life:

1. Nation building, hence my 14 years in public office culminating in serving a term as Minister of Finance responsible for an era of fundamental structural reform to better assure sustainable growth;
2. Business building, my focus for the last 20 years serving as a director on many public and private companies in NZ, the Pacific, the USA and the UK;
3. Family, the foundation on which everything is built. I was born in 1950, and happily married fellow lawyer Andrew Wright in 1975. We are the proud parents of Dr Lucy White, a veterinarian, and Dr Oliver Crush, a scientist.

I am a person global in outlook, ambitious for change for countries, companies and individuals to better realise their potential, curious of thought and dedicated to innovation.

I am an activist by nature, healthy, fit and physically active, engaging in a wide range of sports, exercise and travel adventures.
